STATE OF WISCONSIN

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

BY THE GOVERNOR.

For the blessings of health, peace and prosperity accorded to the people of Wisconsin the last year, and for the progress made in all that contributes to advance our material and moral welfare, it is fitting that we should reverently return thanks unto Almighty God.

Now, therefore, I, Jeremiah M. Rusk, Governor of the State of Wisconsin, conforming to the proclamation of the president of the United States, do appoint as a day of Thanksgiving and praise, and I recommend that on that day the people of Wisconsin abstain from labor, and, meeting in their places of worship, give thanks to the Supreme Ruler for his kindness and mercy, and that the poor be generously remembered.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 1888,

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of Wisconsin to be affixed. Done at the capitol, in Madison, this 12th day of November, in the thousand one hundred and eightieth year.

J. M. RUSK.

By the governor:

Enos G. Turner, Secretary of State.

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY AND TEMPERANCE.

Discussing the temperance question from the standpoint of a republican, the Toledo Blade says:

"Now let our third party brethren devote their energies to fighting rum instead of the republican party, and they will do more for prohibition in four years than they can accomplish on their present line in twenty-five."

Another view of the perplexing question comes from the Philadelphia Record, a democratic paper:

"A keen observer of our politics says that the temperance movement has become a fight against the saloon, instead of a fight against drunkenness. The root of the evil lies in the men who drink, not in the cup out of which they drink nor in the warehouse where whisky is stored."

One of the most difficult questions before the American people for settlement is that of the liquor traffic. It is a curse to the country. No fair-minded man will deny that. It is corrupting in our politics, an evil influence in municipal government, a bane to society, a blighting curse to thousands of homes in every state in the Union, and a wrecking power to tens of thousands of working men. In one respect it is like human slavery—not one good thing can be said of it.

But the sober point to consider is what are we going to do about it? There is a growing temperance sentiment in the land. In every state that sentiment is becoming stronger year by year. But there is no temperance platform yet drafted on which all temperance people can stand. There is a division of sentiment. This may do no particular harm for the present, but it certainly does not seem to hasten the coming of the good time when the whisky power shall be throttled. One way to improve the prospect for temperance reform, is the suggestion by the Bluds—for the third party brethren to begin to fight rum and cease fighting the republican party. But can the honest temperance sentiment of the country hope that the leaders of the third party movement will reform themselves so as to make war against the deadly traffic in liquor, and not go on stabbing the party that some day must produce the common sense—the progressive element—that will drive from politics, from municipal governments, from society and from the home, the demoralizing influence of the saloon? One would naturally suppose that if these political temperance workers were honest in their spirit and purpose, they would work where it would do the most good; but they do not seem to be honest, and they spend their energies where they will do the most harm to the temperance cause. The gubernatorial campaign in New York confirms this conclusion.

But the Philadelphia Record is not on solid ground with its argument. Fighting drunkenness does not give the temperance movement a victory. Moral suasion is good, but isn't fighting against the wholesale traffic in the cause of drunkenness, better?

The republican members of the Wisconsin legislature will have an opportunity to distinguish themselves during the coming session. They will have an opportunity to respond to the popular temperance sentiment of the state. The temperance question should be met. It will confront the members. They can't escape it. Something must be done—something sensible, practical and fair. Let them consider the submission question—consider it honestly and with that thoughtfulness and soberness that it deserves. Then let them also discuss with many sense and practical wisdom, the local option law with higher license. If the republican members of the legislature will simply do their duty in this matter, they will honor themselves and perform a splendid service for the people.

WISCONSIN IN THE CABINET.

There seems to be much on which to found a hope that Wisconsin will find a place in President Harrison's cabinet. The state not only did much for him in the national convention, but for another and probably a better reason, Wisconsin can claim such a position—it has the right kind of material out of which to make a splendid cabinet officer. This subject, the Milwaukee Sentinel prints a very timely and wise editorial on the subject:

"At present four citizens of Wisconsin are suggested for such a position: Senator Spitzer for attorney general; Governor Rusk and General Fairchild for secretary of war, and Henry O. Payne for postmaster general. Senator Spitzer may as well be dropped from the list, since it is understood that he does not wish to leave the senate, and his constituents prefer that he should remain where he is. This leaves three candidates, which is just two too many. We do not use the word candidate in the sense of a person who is himself seeking a position, since neither of the gentlemen named is responsible for the bringing of his name in this connection before the public. But the fact remains that there are two too many of them. The Sentinel would like to see them all successful, but that cannot be, and if they all continue to be urged, neither is likely to be chosen. Gov. Rusk is one of the state's favorite sons. He has been an excellent executive and has served the country well both in war and in peace. The same is true of Gen. Fairchild. Mr. Payne is a younger man, but he has rendered great and valuable services to his party, which are well recognized, and he is known to possess business qualifications and technical knowledge of postal affairs which would make him one of the most efficient postmaster generals the country has ever had. The republicans of the state would be gratified by the appointment of either of the gentlemen named, and feel that it would be invidious to prefer one to another. And yet without some concentration of sentiment upon a single candidate, there is no chance for a Wisconsin man unless Gen. Harrison is so prepossessed in favor of some one man in this state that he is bound to choose him in any event, which is not the probable situation.

"Under these circumstances if we must make a choice, we shall have to be governed by cold-blooded business considerations as to the comparative interest which this state has in furnishing a secretary of war or a postmaster-general for the new cabinet. In this happy country, where we are seldom known the war department and its operations concern very slightly the people in general. On the other hand, the postoffice department is one that comes into the closest relations with all the people in town or country, and its efficient management is of the greatest importance to every class of the community. For this reason the state of Wisconsin would probably be most benefited if she were to contribute to the incoming administration a postmaster-general who would restore order and efficiency in the somewhat demoralized and debilitated postal service. Mr. Payne could be depended upon to perform the service, and to perform it in an admirably thorough manner. As already said, Gen. Harrison may not come to this state for any member of his cabinet, but if he does, the question on which we should now agree, is whether we prefer to have a secretary of war or a postmaster-general."

"SAD, BUT NOT SURPRISING."

The Washington Post reports on a point in which the contest just closed was in some small degree an educational campaign for Mr. Cleveland:

"The bitterest pill the president has to swallow is the partisan action of a number of republicans whom he kept in office, who voted and worked against him with all their might. The republicans told him yesterday that he might as well know that they would do this, but it seemed that he did not foresee, and then departed toward the administration, is a source of great disappointment to him."

This is sad, but not surprising. Every democrat told him beforehand how it would be. —New York Sun.

When this point is followed up closely the Sun will find that there is not much address in it as it supposes. If Mr. Cleveland is a man of ordinary observation, he will have already seen that the number of republicans kept in office by him and who worked and voted against him, are infinitesimally small.

Will the Sun or the Post answer this question, "Where are there any republicans left in important offices in all this broad land who are cut out and cut republicans?" It is true that Persin is still postmaster in New York city, but why?

Did he do any work against Cleveland? Did he allow his few republican clerks who hold their positions by virtue of the civil service rules, to pay a cent into the campaign fund? Is not Postmaster Pearson a product of mugwumpism?"

It's no sense to say that Mr. Cleveland can have any heart-burnings, or that he has a bitter pill to swallow, in contemplating "the partisan actions of the republicans who have kept in office."

A clearer sweep was never made by any president since the days of Jackson than that made by Mr. Cleveland; and it has been a bitter pill to swallow it is that he has wrecked himself and his party on broken planks—not having redeemed a single one he ever made—but also that he made unfortunate attempts to plant on American soil the British system of free trade.

One of the funniest post election happenings is the sudden conversion of the democratic party to civil service reform. Every democrat in office now honestly thinks that civil service is a good thing and ought to keep him in office. He didn't think so four years ago, when the republicans were in office, but within the last two days he has changed his mind on that point. The Boston Herald, a supporter of Cleveland, smiles in making this mention of the high regard the democrats now have for civil service: We are pleased to notice a growing respect for the principles of civil service reform among the democrats. This feeling is particularly noticeable among those members of the party who hold office themselves or have friends in office under the federal government. It has grown rapidly with this change since Tuesday last, and we expect to see it continue its growth from now on."

There does not seem to be any doubt that the republicans will have the house of representatives by six majority. Sen-

NATIONAL BOARD OF TRADE.

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—At the morning session of the National Board of Trade, delegates from the cities of Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and St. Louis, where it is proposed to have a branch, announced as the next place of meeting, the time to be fixed by the president. Resolutions were presented, discussed and adopted as follows:

Demanding early action by Congress looking to a reduction of our present enormous revenue, and to the protection of existing industries; favoring the adoption of a uniform system of weights in transactions in grain, sugar, etc.; urging Congress to provide at once such defenses as will be necessary to protect our coast and inland waters, and to demand an increase of preventive measures against the evil of foreign immigration; favoring the granting of subsidies similar to those given to other nations to American steamship companies; favoring the establishment of a national bank; also that subsidies and every other proper means should be adopted for the purpose of aiding our merchants to compete on equal terms for South American trade; and urging the adoption of every legitimate means to obtain an amendment to the Constitution to provide by law for the suspension of the purchase of silver bullion and the coinage of silver dollars; so that the coinage of silver may be adjusted to the value of the dollar; and the increase of the National Board of Health, in order to lessen, by the excellent work of that body, the dangers of contagion.

An item is going the rounds of the press meeting like this: "The Hon. Sam Randall presented his compliments to the able democratic editors and assures them that he is feeling pretty well thank you." Mr. Randall has right to feel well. He is a democrat, but a republican, and in the effort to kick Mr. Randall out of the party, they kicked themselves out of power. So Mr. Randall has occasion to feel well.

In looking over the democratic exchanges we find that our democratic friends are still encouraged by their prospects for success in '92. This is a good deal like the tramp who asked for dinner and got a tick and said he felt encouraged." "How so?" asked a companion. "Why," said he, "I might have been killed."

Vice President Morton, will be able to go to Washington with the satisfaction that he can run a fairly good house, pay the rent in advance, and live reasonably comfortable. He is worth twenty million, and is the richest man ever elected to the vice presidency.

PICKING UP.

The Closing of the Campaign Has a Good Effect on Goods Business.

New York, Nov. 17.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: The revival of trade resulting from removal of political uncertainty has made some progress during the past week, though not in exact or direction quite according to anticipations. The speculative tendency has been distinctly suppressed by a singular combination of influences. The volume of legitimate trade continues large, but with a tendency to decrease, and the anticipation of improvement in prices was no longer present to the election that comparative dullness has followed. The war of rates between trunk lines is the chief cause of disturbance in speculative circles, and most of the time during the campaign has been spent in discussing the effect of the election on the market.

When the election was over, the market was up, and it has been up ever since by the stoppage of exports from the Atlantic ports and the enormous movement from the Pacific coast. In the month of October 3,261,350 bushels of wheat were exported from Pacific ports, and only 303,300 from all the principal Atlantic ports; and during the last five weeks Atlantic shipments have been only 17,000 bushels, against 3,832,411 last year. No speculative holders are still around, and the market is now in a state of equilibrium, with sales of 17,000 bushels. Another depressing feature is the export of 4,700,000 bushels of corn in five weeks against 2,800,000 last year, pointing to less foreign demand for wheat, with assurance of larger supplies. Corn is three-fourths cent cheaper, with speculation narrow, and sales only 4,200,000 bushels.

Reports from interior points vary more than from the coast, and the complaints of dullness of some Southern points are attributed tolessness of the cotton crop. At the West the movement is generally large, though not at all points quite up to expectations. The Treasury observes that the demand for currency has fallen off. Scarce any complaint is made of collections, and yet the number of failures has been considerable in some quarters, and the whole larger than normal for the whole year. Failure for the last seven days was 1.75 per cent, as compared with 2.21 last week and 2.24 for the corresponding week of last year.

BOSTON, Nov. 17.—The Commercial Bulletin is the most active wool market for the week—The sales for the week—$867,572 pounds—are the largest ever made in one week, and has not been heard from since he sailed. CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—The Supreme Court alleged murderer and ex-employee of the Hospital. McDonald is brother of Mike McDonald, the noted political two years ago. The reversal means that the case will be remanded back to Cook

County for a new trial and the liberation

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Provisional officers in the War Department and at the headquarters of the army place but little credence in the story that 1,000 young men will invade Oklahoma on the first of November. The reason is that the Government's movement is going solidly for the purpose of forcing Congress to pass the Oklahoma bill during the first month of the approaching session. It, however, Congress should not pass the bill and the "boomers" enter the Territory.

on the ground that when a local assembly

was suspended, the order applied to individual members, and therefore no

cessation could be made to another assembly. An appeal was taken under Schilling's ruling, which the Committee on Appeals and Grievances

sustained. After the three hours' discussion the assembly voted that a member of the suspended assembly be granted

a transfer card.

The address after being printed in the two languages with the hope of bringing about an organization of reforms

for the betterment of the condition of the working-woman of those countries.

At the beginning of the afternoon session Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, D. D., of New York City, was introduced to the assembly.

Dr. Crafts is the advocate of Natural-Sabbath reform, and by request he addressed the delegates upon that subject.

He said that Sabbath reform needed

nationalization, as it had been created

as a local issue.

National evil needed a National remedy.

National System of Work was being put into work in its postal service on Sunday. He was particularly severe on Sunday trials and military parades of the regular army at the various posts and garrisons throughout the country.

The Committee on the State of the Order

submitted a report recommending the appointment of a special committee to devote to the question of the observance of the Sabbath law. The report was unanimously approved, and the committee will be appointed later on in the session.

Unexpected trouble arose in the assembly by a delegate from District Assembly 44, of New York City, submitting a proposition that no newspaper man be made ineligible to membership in the order.

After several speeches had been made

and the proposition was defeated, only six delegates voting for it.

A resolution was passed for the organization of local and district assemblies for
